Harness Racing needs a woman's touch

By Ryan Macedonio

Who wants to talk about the big elephant in the room? I'm talking about the one that no one actually wants to talk about . . . the one that is absolutely hindering our growth as a sport and an economically viable industry. I'm talking about women! Specifically, women who are consuming our product, not horsewomen, that's another topic for another time.

The racetrack is not a welcoming place for a woman in 2017. Could you imagine what it would feel like if you were a single woman who just happened to walk into a racetrack by herself, with no knowledge of what is going on? She would see lots and lots of men. Mostly by themselves scanning programs, making bets and yelling at the TV screens.

Yes, it might be an interesting sight because excitement is contagious, but she's certainly not going to engage anyone.

How long do you think she would sit at the bar watching everyone? Probably not that long because she'd most likely be the only single woman there!

She knows that everyone would take notice of her, constantly eyeing her. This is something that every woman can attest to, but it's probably something most men won't even think of thinking about. She may walk into the track and take a look, but get out of dodge fast.

Did you know that more women watch The Walking Dead than men? Sports in general have a high demographic of women viewers, but harness racing has ignored women and created an unappealing environment for women at live events. When was the last time you saw a group of women at a racetrack who weren't influenced by men to attend that event?

It wouldn't take much to change the culture either. Start with an all-inclusive

HOLLA AT UR BOY

Sent from gate, brushed right back to top, attacked by winner half, no match, chased, tired bit. Nick's choice. Rail. User.

KG EXPLORER

3rd over half, a nice lead up trip, urged, up and away. Confidence builder. Tackles tougher.

PL JALAPENO

First out near half, rim balance, faded from the skirmish. A little class relief in his third start back.

VOW TO WIN

Sent from pole, yielded, tracked top pair to lane, urged, no rally in fast heat. Mooney hops aboard. Small shot.

CRUSIN FOR YOU

Parked eighth plus, yielded to retaker, tracked, loose bit late, driven, fair. Tony's choice. One more thought.

MIGHTY FINE HIHO

Slow leaving, shuffled last, angled 3-4 wide off cover, driven, much best of the others. Steve chose. Gimmick must.

BEST DREAM SEEKER

Out past quarter, cover past half, not good flow, kicked 3wide, driven, just fair. Luke returns. Has tactical issues.

CENALTA ECLIPSE

Looped leaving, brushed back quarter, slow clip to lane, tapped to shake off attacker, easy. Hikes, adds William. Plan from outside?

day spa & salon. I'd be willing to bet that you could sell or rent space in the grandstand that is much cheaper than a typical strip mall.

Women search out quality spas, because it's a planned event, so the location is irrelevant, and you don't gain too much from foot traffic. Have a women-friendly restaurant, possibly focused on wine tasting events.

I can go on and on, but the point is that if you create a welcoming atmosphere where women feel comfortable going alone or with a group, it will give a much needed boost to the sport.

Change the culture and show women that they are a true focus of your ideas. Women buy merchandise and are more loyal than men to a brand or product once they're attached. The opportunities are there, we're just ignoring them.
